Tablets are Serious Business

By: Devra

July 5th

Tablets are powerful business tools. Their portability, Internet connectivity, and specially designed apps make business on-the-go more convenient, and increase productivity.

There are countless ways to use tablets in business. In addition to sending e-mails, they can be used for conference calls, creating presentations, showing informational videos, completing forms, creating charts and graphs, typing reports, and managing accounts.

Companies are constantly finding creative uses for tablets. Do you use tablets in your business? If so, please let us know how.

Jans De Witt

I agree that tablets can increase productivity. I own an appliance repair company and I supply all my repair technicians with tablets. They use them to locate and record appointment information, and find customer locations.

More importantly, they use the tablets to access information they need on the job, such as diagrams or repair instructions. They also use them to purchase parts online, and text questions to fellow technicians.

Our tablets are more rugged than your average consumer tablet. In our field we need tablets that can handle being dropped and getting wet.

Hi, Rafael,

I've been reading a lot about the use of tablets in business, and I think tablets can benefit our business.

Pardo Makeup salespeople can walk around the store with tablets (loaded with a specially designed app) to assist customers. If a customer enquires about a certain product, the salesperson will be able to show them an image of the product on the tablet, along with information about it, and perhaps a brief video. Salespeople would also be able to play how-to videos for customers to demonstrate how to apply certain products.

The salespeople could also use the tablet to check out customers on the spot, so they don't have to wait in line for the cashier.

These are just a few ideas that have come to mind. Would you be interested in sitting down and further discussing the topic?

Best,
Eva Groski
